

BEHAVIORAL FUND R

Fund Benchmark: STOXX Europe 600 NR

Investment Objective

MAPFRE AM Behavioral Fund is an European equity fund whose objective is to generate attractive risk-adjusted returns by taking advantage of market inefficiencies caused by investors' psychological biases. The fund managers study situations in which irrational decisions by market participants tend to lead to fundamentally mispriced securities. The investment process employs quantitative screens and tracks certain corporate actions that may lead to behavioral inefficiencies. Once a potential mispricing has been identified, the fund managers analyze the opportunity using a fundamental analysis process that applies a value investing philosophy. The fund targets companies that trade at a discount to intrinsic value and are likely to reward patient investors by compounding shareholder value over time. The fund will invest at least 75% of its net assets in European-listed companies, directly in equities or through the use of equity derivatives. As a complement to this European focus, the fund has the ability to diversify its exposure and invest up to 25% of its net assets in companies listed on exchanges in non-European OECD countries.

Management Commentary

MAPFRE AM Behavioral Fund closed the month with a return of 0,57% in the institutional class and 0,54% in the retail class, relative to its benchmark, the STOXX Europe 600 (Net Return) EUR, that returned -1,09%.

The shares with a higher contribution to the total fund performance in the period where Dynavox Group (21 basis points), STMicroelectronics (17 bps) and CIE Automotive (17 bps). On the other side, the shares with a lower (or negative) contribution where Tubacex (-27 bps), Borussia Dortmund (-17 bps) and Eckert & Ziegler (-4 bps).

European stocks traded lower in June, ending a period of outperformance vs the US. During the month, we saw concerns increasing over Middle East tensions. At the same time, global trade dynamics remained a dominant market driver. In this period, there were no new additions to the MAPFRE AM Behavioral Fund portfolio. There were also no significant sells.

Consequently, the fund's investment level has been reduced from the levels we had by end of last month, placing it at a liquidity position close to 9%. It continues having the greatest exposure to industrial, consumer, technology companies and a relative underweight in banks, telecommunications, and utilities.

Economic and Market Commentary

Despite ongoing geopolitical tensions, international stock markets posted a positive performance in June, supported by a combination of factors: 1. Progress in negotiations between the United States and its key trading partners aimed at reducing tariffs, along with U.S. mediation efforts in conflicts in the Middle East and Eastern Europe, have played a significant role. These efforts include pursuing ceasefire agreements between Israel and Iran, and between Russia and Ukraine. 2. The signing of NATO's new rearmament plan, which targets defense spending of 5.0% of GDP, has also served as a key driver of equity markets. 3. The moderation of inflation rates in the Eurozone has allowed the European Central Bank (ECB) to implement an additional 25-basis-point interest rate cut. However, it appears that the current rate-cutting cycle is nearing its end, with analysts projecting only one final cut of the same magnitude in the second half of 2025. In contrast, the Federal Reserve, despite pressure from Donald Trump, has kept official interest rates in the U.S. unchanged. The Fed is opting to wait and assess the inflationary impact of newly implemented tariffs. In May, U.S. inflation rose to 2.4% in headline terms (+0.1% versus April) and to 2.8% in core terms. In this environment, the MSCI World Index appreciated by 4.22%, buoyed by strong performances in emerging and Asian markets, which benefited from the depreciation of the dollar against other currencies. Specifically, the MSCI Emerging Markets Index rose by 5.65%, the MSCI EM LATAM by 5.68%, and the MSCI Asia Pacific ex-Japan by 7.42%. Another major beneficiary of currency movements and easing U.S.-China trade tensions was the U.S. technology sector. The NASDAQ 100 climbed 6.27%, while the Dow Jones 30 gained 4.32%, supporting a 4.96% advance in the S&P 500. On the other hand, European equity markets came under pressure due to the euro's appreciation and the economic drag of geopolitical and tariff-related tensions. These headwinds were reflected in weakening macroeconomic data. The EURO STOXX 50 declined by 1.18%, weighed down by losses in the IBEX 35 (-1.13%), CAC 40 (-1.11%), FTSE MIB (-0.74%), DAX 30 (-0.37%), and FTSE 100 (-0.13%). Turning to fixed income, the 2/10-year yield curves remained mostly stable, except in Spain—where the curve steepened—and in Italy, where it flattened. U.S. bond yields for both 2- and 10-year maturities declined by 21 basis points. Meanwhile, German and Portuguese yields rose by 6.5 and 5.5 basis points, respectively. In the 2-year segment, Spanish and Italian yields increased by 4.9 and 5.3 basis points, while Spain's 10-year yield rose by 13.2 basis points and Italy's decreased slightly by 0.2 basis points. Finally, it is worth noting that U.S. intervention to reduce tensions between Israel and Iran, following attacks on three of Iran's key nuclear facilities—raising fears of a potential closure of the Strait of Hormuz, a key conduit for global oil exports—helped ease market volatility. As a result, the price of gold remained mostly flat, with a marginal increase of 0.18%, while Brent crude oil rose by 5.81%.
